Equity markets around the world have paused over the last while with emerging markets decidedly weaker. Bond yields in the US have strengthened over the month while European yields have weakened. The same picture is evident in currency markets with the dollar appreciating against most currencies on a trade weighted basis. What has changed from a quarter ago when the world appeared to be on a synchronized growth path? The answer appears to be a combination of Trump's slow but inexorable disruption of global trade flows, structural agreements, and regulatory shifts that negatively impact the rest of the world while putting America first through deregulation of the local market and a rather large tax rebate. The net result is slower emerging market growth, preference for the dollar as investors move to the US in search of growth and returns, and a mini blow out in the marginal European bond markets where yields have been suppressed for far too long as a result of the ECB's extended QE program. In short: the world is likely to grow at a much slower pace with heightened levels of structural risk as equilibrium levels are reset. The performance of domestic stocks and bonds have mirrored the trend in emerging markets. A number of positive developments are evident within the political arena. Sadly, SA has too much ground to catch up and it is too late in the cycle for any meaningful input from external growth sources. Time will tell whether the investment cycle improves as a result of foreign direct investment. The interest is evident, but the commitment is still fragile. Foreigners have been net buyers of SA bonds but net sellers of SA equity. Against this background we have maintained a defensive position in your portfolio with higher than average cash levels. We see this defensive position as prudent within the current environment as central banks move further to "taper" and growth vectors shift lower.

An analysis of factors affecting the adherence to the policy objective is contained in the fund manager commentary together with performance as reported. A detailed listing of changes from the previous quarter is available on request from info@miplan.co.za or clientservices@ipmc.co.za

IP Management Company is a member of ASISA. A statement of changes in the composition of the portfolio during the reporting period is available on request. The performance is calculated for the portfolio. The individual investor performance may differ as a result of initial fees, the actual investment date, the date of reinvestment and dividend withholding tax. The fund is invested in portfolios of collective investment schemes that levy their own charges, and which could result in a higher fee structure for the fund.
